OTTAWA - The 21st anniversary of the Montreal massacre reignited political combat over gun control Monday. ...

Harper was not in the Commons on Monday. But he issued a statement deploring the Montreal massacre as "one of the most heinous acts of violence in Canadian history." He said the best way to honour the victims is "by working to eliminate violence against women while making our communities safer for all Canadians."

By contrast, Ignatieff said the best memorial is "strict, relentless gun control."
